Davidson Co., Lexington, The Dispatch, 3 Dec 2008, "Retired deputy killed in High Point accident" {25707}

“Retired deputy killed in High Point accident

A retired Davidson County sheriff's deputy died and his wife was seriously injured in a traffic accident Sunday morning in High Point.

According to a High Point Police Department press release, Jeffrey Rollins, 53, of Quail Lane, Thomasville, died after the Toyota Camry he was driving was rear-ended on East Hartley Drive at Johnson Street.

The release said the Camry was hit by a Chevrolet Suburban traveling at a high speed driven by Brady Barnett Snow, 39, of 510 Roseland St., High Point, at 11:17 a.m. Snow received only minor injuries in the accident. The release said he is charged with involuntary manslaughter and no operator's license.

Rollins died on the scene, the release said, and his wife, Vickie, was taken to Wake Forest University Baptist Medical Center in Winston-Salem for treatment. She was listed in fair condition Wednesday afternoon.

Capt. Tony Hamrick with the High Point Police said Snow's license was taken away due to medical reasons but could not provide details. Police do not believe Snow was intoxicated, but official lab results are pending.

"We're still trying to determine how fast he was going, but it was a high rate of speed," Hamrick said. He did not provide a range of estimated speeds but could confirm the Suburban was traveling at or above highway speeds.

Snow is being held in the Guilford County Jail under a $400,000 secured bond.

News of Rollins' death spread quickly to the men and women he served with in the Davidson County Sheriff's Office. Rollins retired a few years ago after 27 years but returned occasionally to visit old friends.

Kaye Everhart worked with Rollins in the civil division for about six years. She described a man who kept his personal and professional lives separate but maintained the same kind of integrity whether at home or in uniform.

"Jeff was just a super, super person," Everhart said. "He was always the same, no matter what day it was or how he was. He was always upbeat and thoughtful of other people."

The one thing Everhart remembered him for was also noted by Sgt. Bill McLain and Michael Horne, two deputies who served with Rollins for years: Jeff Rollins loved his wife.

"He loved Vickie more than anything," Horne said. "I never heard the man say anything about her that wasn't praise."

"He told everybody he hoped he went before she did because he couldn't survive without her," McLain said. "There for a while, she had some serious health problems, and he was so afraid of losing her."

"I ate breakfast with him a lot while she was going through surgeries and treatments. He was always optimistic. He just kept pulling for her and telling her she was going to make it."

And she did. This past weekend, McLain said he heard that the couple celebrated their 31st anniversary at a little place they owned in the mountains.

The two deputies worked closely together earlier in their career. McLain said he was asked once to name Rollins' biggest flaw. After a moment of thought, he said Rollins was too nice.

"Heck, the only person he didn't like probably was a guy that shot at him one time," McLain said.

Horne was Rollins' partner during the last two years with the sheriff's office. They worked in the civil division, collecting debt. Horne said he was fresh out of the Marines and butted heads with some of the other deputies over policy at first, but Rollins befriended him.

"Jeff was set in his ways, but he was always respectful and thoughtful to everyone," he said.

Horne gave him the nickname "Crash" after he wrecked a patrol car, but Horne did, too. Horne said Rollins was never ashamed to bow his head and say grace over a meal in a restaurant.

“Your testimony is how you live your life from day to day,” Horne said. “And Jeff had an awesome testimony. They say you never know when your time will come, but there’s not a shred of doubt in my heart that Jeff’s heart was right, and now he’s where he needs to be.””

Granville Co., Oxford, Public Ledger, ca. 25 Oct 1916, Obituary of Rebecca Breedlove Royster [#426] {25691}

“ENTERED INTO REST

On the turn of the night on the morning of Wednesday, the 25th of October, 1916, the soul of Rebecca Breedlove Royster, widow of that gallant Confederate Soldier, William B. Royster, winged its flight from a bed of anguish and pain to join its loved ones in that Home beyond the Skies.

Mrs. Royster was a twin-sister of B. I. Breedlove, our beloved chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, who was a comrade in arms of her husband and their friend, Chief Justice Walter Clark in the 70th North Carolina Regiment. Two other brothers were Capt. James G. Breedlove and John H. Breedlove, of Company G, 23rd North Carolina Troops, and no braver soldiers ever followed their great commanders Lee and Jackson.

Mrs. Royster came of stalwart ancestry, who settled and built up that part of Granville County between Oxford and Williamsboro and developed it into homes, whose occupants were distinguished for the sturdy independence and gallantry of the men and the grace, beauty and virtue of the women. She was a worthy representative of her race. Endowed by nature with industry, patience, and courage, accompanied by a sweet, lovable disposition, she was the mainstay and comfort during the Civil War, when her brothers were battling for their State. Soon after the conflict was over she married the young comrade and friend of her twin brother, and all through those trying days of poverty and reconstruction, she was ever his guiding star and helpmeet. They were true samples of the many thousands of Southern boys and girls who, without money or social influence, trusting only in God and in their love and faith in each other, faced the problems of life in a desolated county, and achieved victory over all, and laid the foundation of that prosperity which our grand old State is now, and has been for so many years enjoying.

Her parents were Manson Breedlove and Martha Breedlove, and she was born at their home near Midawy, now Dexter, on the 4th day of October, 1846. She married William Bannister Royster on the 23rd day of December, 1869. From this union there were born twelve children, namely:

James Royster, who married Susie Pattillo and has five children.

William M. Royster, who married Lottie Sizemore and has three children.

Issac B. Royster, who married Sadie Sizemore and has four children.

Edward G. Royster, who married Lizzie Owen and has four children.

Essie Royster, who married L. T. Evans and died leaving two little girls, Helen and Zuline, who lived with their grandmother.

Mattie Royster, who married W. E. Heath and has one child.

Clyde Royster, who married W. E. Comer and has five children.

Rosa Royster, who married G. R. Nelson and has nine children.

Della Royster, who married Joseph P. Hunt and has one child.

Misses Emma, Flora, and Sue Royster. The last three of whom lived with their mother.

In early life she gave her heart to God and was baptized into the fellowship of Stateline Church, August 1896. Obedience to his commands and devotion to the welfare of her children and motherless grandchildren were the distinguishing characteristics of her life. Her faith was sublimely beautiful. There was no hesitation or doubt in her mind as to what the result would be. Three nights before she died her brother, seeing some movement which he thought indicated suffering, said, "Sister, how are you?" She quietly answered, "Oh. I am well; I am almost home." Not exactly comprehending her meaning he inquired, "Are you afraid to die?" With a heavenly smile illuminating her face, she replied, "Why, no; I have just seen Billy and other loved ones with Jesus, and I am going home."

She had been longing for some time to see a friend who was detained by business in a far distant city, but who providentially called to Oxford on the day before she died, and went in to see her. As soon as she heard his voice she opened her eyes and said, "Oh, I am glad, so glad, you have come." She bore with patience a most painful and terrible disease without murmur of complaint, and quietly passed away at 2:30 o'clock on Wednesday morning, October 26, and was buried by the side of her husband at the family burying ground not far from Bullock's station.

The family and friends of course feel her loss, but her record is such that they can contemplate her departure without fear or trembling as to the hereafter. The life of such a woman is a rich heritage of which any of us might justly be proud. Dr. R. H. Marsh, who baptized her, and who for many years was her beloved pastor, spoke the words of sympathy and comfort to the presence of many loving friends at Bullock Baptist Church. Text: Psalms 35:16, "I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth for his mother."

The active pallbearers were the following nephews: R. A. Norwood, Laura Breedlove, Calvin Breedlove, Oscar Breedlove, Cooper Hart, J. K. Wood.

The flower bearers were Misses Lois Parkinson, Ellen Woltz, Jessie Pittard, Sallie Norwood, Vergie Crenshaw, Pearl Royster, Mary Royster, Janie Frazier, Mary Norwood, Nerva May."

“Mr. [Bennett] Breedlove [#412], an aged citizen of Roanoke Rapids, was struck by the Seaboard Air Line shifting engine on the canal bridge at Roanoke Rapids on Monday and was fatally injured. He died of his injuries Monday night. Mr. Breedlove was walking towards the engine. The engineer, on seeing his peril, blew the whistle. Mr. Breedlove instead of turning from the bridge attempted to cross the canal facing the engine. He was struck and knocked into the canal. The engineer stopped his engine as quickly as possible and the train crew took Mr. Breedlove out of the water and prompt medical assistance was called but he was beyond human aid and died Monday night a few hours after the accident. Mr. Breedlove had been down to the Roanoke Cotton Mills to take his children, who worked at the mill, their dinner and was returning home at the time of the sad accident that ended his life.”

Wake Co., Raleigh News & Observer, 5 Feb 1996, "Three Powerless Days Take Toll on Family's Patience, Woodpile" {7903}

"RALEIGH - Marvin Breedlove [#4158211] sat on the sofa, bundled in a sweater and overcoat, and shelled pecans. His son Matthew, wearing a sweatshirt over his warm-up suit, played with his battery-powered Nintendo Gameboy. Buddy, the dog, sat on the hearth soaking up heat from the fireplace.

Not much else to do when it's 20 degrees outside and you're in your third day without electric heating, television or the other things a healthy power supply allows.

"We've done a lot of sitting around looking at each other," said Marvin's wife, Frances. "That and visiting friends who have electricity."

Until the Breedloves had full power restored Sunday night, they had spent the weekend at their house a few miles north of Raleigh with enough electricity to power light bulbs but not appliances. Carolina Power & Light workers had told them and their neighbors that heavier electric demands might overload the already-damaged transformer in their neighborhood, Mrs. Breedlove said.

The microwave took four minutes to move a sandwich from cold to lukewarm. The answering machine flickered off and on seemingly at random. And the television wouldn't stay on long enough for Marvin to see even the highlights of his beloved Wolfpack's Saturday night basketball victory over arch rival UNC-Chapel Hill.

The family was among thousands of Duke Power and CP&L customers in central North Carolina without full power during one of the coldest weekends of the year. Most of those thousands lost even the luxury of working lights. Only Hurricane Hugo in September 1989 has ever caused more outages, a CP&L spokesman said Sunday.

The Breedloves relied on their fireplace for warmth. When they ate at home, the meals came courtesy of Matthew, 12, and his brother Brian, 15. The two Boy Scouts cooked a country-style breakfast Saturday over a Sterno can in the garage.

"It's like we're camping out," Marvin said.

But the main source of both food and comfort was a neighbor who invited the Breedloves and four other families in the area with partial power to eat with them, shower at their house and sleep over. Only Marvin stayed home Saturday night to keep the fire burning.

During the days, the Breedloves gathered in the living room talking, doing homework and vying for Buddy's attention. "When he's been sitting next to the fire, he feels really nice to your hands," Matthew said.

The outage was not life-threatening for the Breedloves, as it was for some without neighbors they could turn to or well-stocked fireplaces to keep lit. Mostly it was an irritation, they said. Matthew's science project was delayed;

Brian's programming homework moved temporarily to a neighbor's computer. The backyard batting cage was near collapse from the ice's weight. The family wasn't sure how it would look back on the weekend when life gets back to normal. "That depends on whether the pipes burst," Frances Breedlove said."
